PUBLIC LANDS IN THE STATE OF MAINE.

NUMBER LANDS in the township, half townships and quarter townships, in various parts of the State of Maine, situated on boatable waters, are offered for sale so as to suit all persons who may be disposed to purchase a lot of lumbering operations and will be sold on liberal terms of credit. Also, Lands suitable for agriculture, by the township parts of townships, and in lots for single farms, are offered to accommodate all classes of purchasers.

These lands are well worthy the attention of all persons who are desirous of large timber or agricultural concerns, and are equally deserving the attention of those who only want lands upon which to locate themselves for farming purposes, and who wish to become actual settlers. In no part of our country does the production of the earth find a better market to reward the farmer for his industry.

Those who choose to make up companies to purchase lands for agriculture, can be accommodated with tracts of one, two or three thousand acres, more or less, with an opportunity of selecting lands in a body, where they may greatly improve their condition for a small consideration. For price and terms, apply at the Land Office in the State House, Bangor, where the plans and other documents may be consulted, and every information given showing the location and qualities of the timber and soil.

NOTICE OF FORECLOSURE.

HEREBY give notice that JAMES A. BROOKS on the 19th day of November, anno Domini, 1849, by deed of that date, conveyed to me in fee and in mortgage, that certain lot of land in the town of Bangor, in the County of Penobscot, in the State of Maine, which numbered 18 in the north quarter of said town, containing one hundred and two acres and twenty four square rods according to the survey and plan thereof made by Andrew Strong being the same more or less, that the condition of said deed is broken and that I claim to foreclose the same. OLIVER CROSBY. w3w ap 26

NOTICE.

THE Notes and accounts of Albert Noyes & Co. having been assigned to us, as agents for mortgagees, all persons indebted to said firm, are requested to call and pay the same. FREDERICK HOBBS, ELIJAH L. HAMILIN. Bangor, April 16, 1849. dlv:w3w

Fire at Portland.

On Sabbath evening a fire broke out in a Cooper's shop in Portland, on the East side of Union wharf, in the rear of the large brick store of Eben McEllan. It immediately communicated to that store and to two or three wooden buildings between that and the brick store occupied by Wyer & Co on Fore Street. Thence it crossed Fore Street, where a one story wooden dwelling known as the Owen house was nearly destroyed. To stop the progress of the flames several small buildings were demolished. The amount of damage is stated at about $10,000.

The advertiser says that at one time during the progress of the fire the danger to a great portion of the city was most imminent and the occupants of a large number of stores dwelling houses and offices removed their goods and furniture, and they were exposed to a soaking rain which fell for several hours.

The "tiger like" exertions of the Firemen saved the city, and but few accidents happened, although about twenty families were left without a shelter.

Gardening.

The kitchen garden will require much attention this month. This department of good living and thus pleasurable employment, which with many is a delightful recreation, ought to be largely extended in our city and its vicinity. Salads, Cabbages, Beets, Parsnips, Tomatoes, Asparagus, Peas, Beans, Melons, &c. can all be raised here in great perfection, if the earth be well manured and prepared, and they are properly cultivated. The manure best suited to our gardens is a compost of sand, old stable manure and fine loam or bog earth. Most of our soil being clay the manure mentioned is the most suitable for use here. The earth should be well spaded to a good depth, broken fine as deep as spaded and laid off into beds of convenient width for weeding. We shall not however attempt to give directions for the common work of the gardener. We would however suggest to those who are laying out a garden and stocking it with fruit bearing shrubs as gooseberry, currants &c. that instead of setting their bushes near the fence or building they place them a sufficient distance from these to admit of a walk between the bushes and fence. This will enable you to gather the fruit more conveniently and to keep the roots of the shrubs free from weeds & grass roots. It will also give a neater appearance to a snug garden. Every part of a garden should be kept neat and clean, and diligence for a few years will make the labor of removing weeds very light. In one garden, and a large one in this city, there does not grow probably, in the whole season, more weeds than would fill a peck basket. So much for keeping it clean the year through, for two or three years and using only well rotted manure. It is not well to stir our heavy clay soils when so wet as to clog and smooth over for in such a case the soil dries into a kind of unburnt brick and will require the frost of a winter to make porous and friable. Let the clayey soil be dry and then stir and pulverize, put in the manure, soak the seed and the growth of vegetation will be satisfactory, pleasant and profitable.

Daguerreotype.

At the suggestion of some of our friends we gave notice a few weeks since that some master of this new and highly interesting art would probably find employment in our city. The art is attracting considerable attention abroad and the good taste of our citizens in all matters of refinement will probably secure to an artist a good reward. The notice alluded to caught the attention of a Daguerreotype man, in Portland and he has given notice that if he can receive sufficient encouragement he will visit this city during the present month. Of the Portland Artist Mr. Joseph Ropes, John Neal, pretty good authority, we must say, thus speaks: "Mr. P. is a family grouping with the Daguerreotype, is so fine as to make the pictures he furnishes of an worth more than they cost, as mere works of art, in a collection of engravings, without regard to their value, as likenesses."

The object of this article is to call the attention of our friends to the subject and to recommend to them to leave their names at the Bookstore of E. T. Duren, that it may be known what encouragement can be given.

Mr. Washington Philbrook and Isaac C. McCollister were arrested at Lincoln and examined on Monday last before Justice Jacob Fish for passing counterfeit bills on the Eastern Bank of this city. They were ordered to recognize in the sum of $1000 each if they appear at the Supreme Court to be holden in this city in June next, and for want of security they were yesterday brought to this city and committed to Jail. After arriving here one of them tried the virtue of his legs in an attempt to get away from the officer but was soon secured.

On Sunday evening last, Richard Welch, Dennis Connors, and some other Irishmen got into a dispute, and Connors drew his knife and stabbed Welch, striking him in the arm raised in defence, inflicting a serious wound. During the affray, James Donoghue struck Welch several blows and knocked out one of his teeth. Connors and Donoghue were arrested yesterday, examined before the Police court, and ordered to appear at the District Court.

Fine ripe cherries were in market at Augusta, Ga. on the 21st.

The Boston papers state that the bodies of Charles H. Austin, John Hall, Robert S. Walker, James Trady, (boys,) and Thomas T. Peabody, the teacher, who were drowned in Boston Harbor, were found on Sunday, twelve boats having been employed for that purpose. Hopes are entertained that the remainder will speedily be recovered, as those were found very near each other. The Boat has been raised and there were no bodies in the cuddy. One of the boys who was picked up alive says that when the squall struck the boat, Mr. Oaks told the boys to go forward but instead of doing as directed they moved suddenly to the leeward and brought the gunwale under water and caused the boat to tip and sink.

Liberty loves company, and as we have been compelled to correct an error of our own, we will also point out one in the Democrat of yesterday, where the types have made such havoc as to make the number twenty six and three make a total of twenty seven. If that don't murder the "King's English," it is sure death to Arithmetic.

Our friends are informed that when they have printed notices to publish, it is only necessary for them to request the Judge to order them published in the Bangor Courier, and the request will be granted. We give this notice, as without such request they will be ordered to be published in the Democrat. Will they bear this in mind?

There is a city ordinance against ringing church bells for religious or other services, during week days. This ordinance is frequently violated, and complaints from the sick and suffering have been made to the city marshal, and as his admonitions are disregarded, we leave that he will soon feel compelled to prosecute offenders.

We saw a lot of bright-eyed blooming girls out this morning at five o'clock for a walk in the woods. A May party was got up, it being the first suitable morning since the month commenced. Happy creatures! We should like to assist in crowning the Queen and dancing around the May Pole. We should like to be young again.

An error of some importance occurred yesterday, in our notice of the exhibition of the Fire department, which we wish to correct. Instead of saying that Engine No. 3 "is equal to the other two," we intended to say, equal to either of the other two. We wonder that editors are not all killed for the errors of the types.

Two boys, Lawrence Smyth and Royal, each about twelve years old were sent to the House of Correction yesterday, for thirty days, for taking goods and money from a shop on Main Street, which they entered by means of false keys.

The editor of the Democrat is mistaken in stating that the second resolve in the series published by him, was adopted by the assembly of Rhode Island.

CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, Friday, May 20.

In this Senate, the civil and diplomatic appropriation bill from the House was again taken up, the question being on agreeing to the numerous amendments reported by the committee on finance. A long debate arose on various items relating to the settlement of private land claims in Florida, and the amount of compensation of counsel in attending to such claims.

In the House, Mr. Cushing moved a reconsideration of the vote by which, on yesterday, the report of Mr. Pondexter, relative to the New York Custom House, had been ordered to be printed. On this motion a debate ensued, which occupied the entire session, and finally, when the vote was taken, the vote to reconsider, was negatived, yeas 125, nays 150.

The Philadelphia correspondent of the Journal of Commerce says, under date of Friday last. Judges Burton and Conrad have just delivered the opinion of the Court of General Sessions in the case of Nicholas Biddle, Joseph Copperthwaite and John Andrews, in the matter of the Bank conspiracy, and have decided that there was not sufficient cause for sending the defendants before a jury for trial.

MANILA Jan. 2. Our advices from Macao are to Dec 27. The Chinese were actively and extensively fortifying the banks of the river, and filling up every approach to the city of Canton, with stones and sunken boats. The latest accounts from Chusan were of the 7th of December, per troop ship Jupiter, which was despatched for all the troops that could be spared, and was to sail on her return in a day or two, with 800 men. Mr. Henry Pattinger and the Admiral were at Chusan, and Gen. Gough at Ningpo. It was supposed that an attack would shortly be made on Hangchow, where it was said Keeshen, and a large number of the high mandarins were. The troops were in fine condition, and well supplied with provisions of all sorts. Orders had been received at Hong Kong, for the Cornwallis 74, to proceed immediately to Chusan.

From the Northern Light. The Duty of the Young Men of the Present Day.

BY P. H. AGIN.

It needs but a very superficial knowledge of the past history of the world to convince the mind, that the principal cause of all the evils, moral, political, and religious, which have afflicted the human family, is to be found in, or traced directly to, the ignorance of the great mass of the people.

If this be true, as most persons will readily admit, there is a great degree of responsibility resting upon those who live at the present day, but more especially does this remark apply to the young men of this country, those who are just entering upon the active duties of life, and who are to guide for good or evil the destinies of millions.

There is no country upon the earth of the same extent, which in every point of view, offers as strong inducements to intellectual and moral cultivation as the United States. A free and untrammelled public press, and liberty with all its attendant blessings are ours; and if under these favorable and auspicious circumstances, the great subject of education is neglected, we are criminally negligent of a sacred duty which the Creator in the very nature of things, has plainly marked out for us to pursue.

In tracing the history of the ancient republics, it will be observed, that as a general thing the improvement of the mind did not form a part of the education of the people, but that they were instructed in the art of war and conquest. Such a system would naturally have a tendency to demoralize and enslave the people, and render them unfit to discharge the ordinary duties of citizens, or to manage the affairs of State, and accordingly we see in their mistaken and false systems of education, a fruitful source of their ruin.

We learn then, from the history of mankind thus far, as also by every day's experience, that it is absolutely necessary that the people of this country should be educated, certainly to that degree, that they may comprehend fully the principles, powers and operations of government, in order that they may be enabled to discharge the important political duties, which are imposed upon them by their institutions.

It is a self-evident truth that mankind cannot from their very organization, remain stationary in regard to the improvement of their mental faculties, that they must be continually advancing or receding in the scale of intelligence. This is abundantly proven by the history of every nation. This fact should call forth the best and noblest energies of the young men of America in the cause of education. This, the only experiment of a government based upon the intelligence of the people, has been tried and thus far, it has more than realized the fondest expectations of those who were instrumental in its formation, but it cannot be sustained by the same causes which operated to bring it into existence. If immorality, vice and ignorance usurp the places of intelligence, morality and virtue, then the people of America may bid an eternal farewell to their liberties. Upon this point the history of man and his institutions, teaches us a lesson which is full of instruction, a lesson, which should never be forgotten.

We have seen Greece and Rome in the prime of their youth, in all the vigor and strength of their manhood, noble, even in their decline, and culminate in the compromise of death, and will it become the duty of the future historian, to record the same of America and her institutions? This important question rests with the young men of our country; but, judged from the noble stand which they are now taking in regard to this matter, it could not be entrusted to better hands.

Since the art of printing was discovered, general knowledge has increased to a wonderful extent, in consequence of the cheapness of books, but have virtue and morality, and consequently the happiness of mankind increased in the same ratio? Evidently, not, and for the obvious reason that education has not been directed so as to apply to the practical concerns of life. Now the correction of any evils which have flowed from a false and mistaken system of education, is left with the people, and upon them rests the responsible and important duty of pursuing a course which will be calculated to eradicate those evils and to place knowledge and education upon a firm and solid basis, so that it may produce the happiest results, both for the present, and all future generations.

"Fill time himself shall die."

In the hands of the young men of our land is placed this sacred and important trust, and they owe it to themselves as citizens of America as the countrymen of Washington, Jefferson and Franklin, as they value the institutions which secure to them "life, liberty and happiness," to take care that they execute it faithfully.

But the course which the young men of New York are now pursuing, shows that this trust has not been placed in unworthy hands, that they are not unwilling to take their share of the responsibility. They are, as it were, the pioneers in the system which they have adopted, in order to effect their object, and consequently their course is watched with intense anxiety by their brethren of other parts of the country. From the mountains, valleys, and rock-bound shores of New-England, from the sunny plains of the far south, from the broad and fertile prairies of the boundless west, one universal sentiment only is expressed, calling upon them to pursue the noble course which they have taken, to ameliorate and improve the condition of mankind.

Mount Hope Cemetery, Bangor.

BY J. S. A. S.

It was one of those sunny days in "laughing, leafy, lightsome June,"

"When every brake has found its note,

And sunshine smiles in every flower, that a youthful company had assembled at Mt Hope, not yet the chosen resting place of the dead, to celebrate, in the fairest bowers, a festival to the flowery green of summer. Bright eyes glistened among the dark foliage, and the old pines sang with the music of the merry shout and laugh of youth. Here one brings a garland of the year's brightest flowers, to deck the dark curls of his "Lady Love, there, under that fragrant cedar, another is telling some tale, of which, if we may judge from the cheeks of the fair listener, the winged son of the Paphian Queen is not altogether unconcerned. "Life, love and joy" reigned around. O' who would then have believed that when another summer had come round, one, the gayest and best beloved in that gay band, would sleep beneath those pines, the sleep that hath no waking.

Winter has come and gone; again it is early summer, and that band of youths are again met on that same Mount; not one is absent, they are all there, yet no shout of joy nor merry laugh breaks the silence of the graves, for life and joy have departed, and, if their place has been taken by the "glorious," it is of a different kind, and now they have come, in a procession to leave there, one who but the year before had paid his devotions with the utmost ardor at the shrine of youth and beauty, one whose hopes had been the highest, whose aspirations the most noble. But sickness and death had been there, and they had vanished. Life and hope were ended; but yet the strong empire of love endured, and when earth had received what remained to earth, Mr. Albert H. S., affection wove a rosy chaplet for his tomb, and many a youthful form lingered late that summer's eve, among the gloomy walks of Mount Hope, and as the night closed in, sought reluctantly the busy streets of the city. But the wounds that sorrow inflicts in the bosom of the young are soon healed, and they who had turned aside for a day to the hill of mourning, returned with the morrow's dawning to their accustomed pleasures and soon other thoughts had almost obliterated the remembrance of him who had held such sway in their hearts. Thus it is to be believed by the world.

Yet there was one whom you might have seen at early dawn, or as the sun was sinking behind the neighboring city, often wandering among funeral graves, and bringing her daily tribute of Flora's richest gems to the grave of the loved and early dead. But ere the autumn wind blew chill, she came no more, could it be that she too, had forgotten her first love, in the pleasures of the crowd?

The last leaves of Autumn were falling, as a funeral procession entered that lone cemetery. It was of her who had so often come there to weep. They who followed that fair girl to the tomb, would tell you that Maria had sunk beneath the wasting of consumption. Alas! how few know how many are victims of a broken heart. Thus it is to be believed by a woman. [Lit. Souvenir.]

A Father's Counsel.

Truth will not accommodate itself to us, my son, but we must conform ourself to truth. Hold yours, if too good to do evil.

What you can see look at with your own eyes.

Fear no man so much as yourself.

Learn gladly of others, and whenever they talk of wisdom, honor, happiness, light, freedom, virtue, listen attentively. But do not believe at once all you hear. Words are only words, and when they drive along so very easily and swiftly, be on your guard, for horses that draw a valuable load travel slowly.

It is easy to despise, my son, but to understand is far better.

Teach not others, until you have learned yourself.

Take care of your body, but not as if it were your soul.

Middle not with the affairs of others, but attend diligently to your own.

Flatter no man, and permit none to flatter you.

Depend on no great men.

Do what is worthy of reward, but care not to be rewarded.

St not with scorners, for they are the most miserable of all creatures.

Respect not existing religionists, but esteem and follow simple-hearted good men. A man who has the true fear of God in his heart, is like the sun, he gives light and heat, although he says nothing.

The Two Bells.

With an old Cathedral hung

A mighty bell,

Which never, save at Easter, swung

One solemn knell,

And then so sturdy, all around,

Its echoes fell,

The peasants trembled at the sound

Of that big bell.

Not far from the Cathedral stood

A hermit's cell,

And in its belfry tower of wood

A little bell,

Whose daily tinkling through the year

So faintly fell,

The peasants hardly gave an ear

To that small bell.

The hermit who who owned the same,

And loved it well,

Resolved that it should share the fame

Of the big bell,

So, tolling it but once a year,

With one brief knell,

He taught the peasants to revere

His little bell.

And there are fools in vast repute,

Who, strange to tell,

Acquire their fame by being mute,

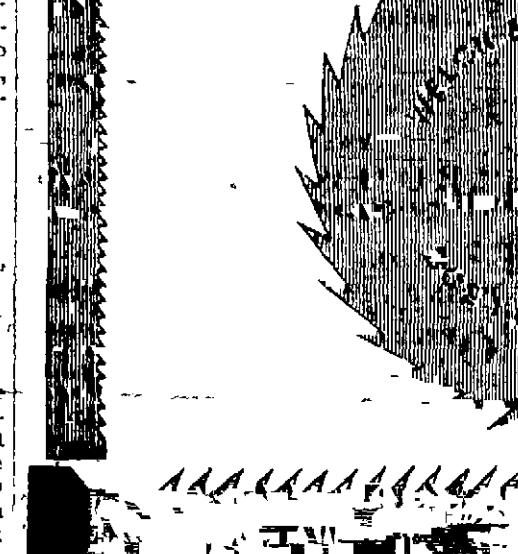

Like that small bell.

These, would be sage, a rarely speak,

For they know well

That frequent utterance would break

The solemn spell.
